

60th ANNUAL CONFERENCE of the New Zealand Association of Resource Management.

2013 NZARM Conference, Gisborne - Holding on to our Roots: The Balance of Resource Sustainability and Culture.

This year's conference will be held on October 8-10.

About the conference

The broad theme of the 2013 NZARM conference will look at some of the traditional aspects of resource management and soil conservation as well as current practises. The Gisborne District has some unique issues around its geology and water and the land use effects on these, as well as an important cultural aspect. The conference aims to showcase these, with a focus on the resource management of the soil and water, the inclusion and consultation of local Iwi in Resource Management, as well as looking forward to where Gisborne is heading in the future.

Call for Presentations

If any member has a particular interest in presenting a paper at this year's conference please contact Laura Savage at laura.savage@gdc.govt.nz

The call for presentations is now open.

Presentations around the following guideline areas are sought:

Soil Conservation

Land use

Water Resources – water plans, irrigation etc

Cultural aspects of Resource Management

Biodiversity

Nutrient Management

Presentations should be no more than 15 minutes in length.

Please supply a short abstract and a short brief about the presenter

Submission Deadline 1 June 2013